

On the 7th of June 2017 we went to Eagles Nest to meet some alpacas. First, we were introduced to them by feeding them - it felt like someone was tickling your hand as they only have bottom teeth. This was followed by petting them. It is very easy to do, all you do is put your arm around their neck, but not too tight, then put your hand on their back.

We did also take a detour to see the pigs (6 babies) and found out an interesting fact. They like to be held upside down by one leg! If you pick them up like a baby they squeal and when you pick them up by one leg they don't.

Then we walked the alpacas around the woods and back to their field. On the way we saw a little baby alpaca. The day was very good because we got to experience something new and unusual that you don't do every day.
